

Ventures Pop-ups

UQ Ventures, in partnership with the Business School, is working with course coordinators to deliver tailored entrepreneurial workshops across all disciplines. Our pop-up workshops can be delivered by the UQ Ventures team during lectures, tutorials or as a special event.

Pitching and Storytelling Workshop

A key skill for the future of work is the ability to communicate in a compelling manner. In this two-hour workshop, the UQ Ventures team will support students to present on what they do, using a combination of narrative patterns, tools and unique content to create a compelling pitch or personal story.

Whether we are pitching a business idea, presenting a project to our colleagues, or talking to customers, we need to be able to interest, convince and influence with our words. This workshop supports students to structure their presentations in an engaging way and to capture the attention of their audience right from the start. This workshop is ideal for classes where students need to present or pitch to an audience, or can complement courses that explore narrative story telling in a professional context.

“This workshop gave me the confidence and ability to pitch my ideas in a safe environment.”

Benjamin Estrade,
Bachelor of Computer Science

